

LET'S TALK MENTAL HEALTH - WEBINAR RECORDING

Hoge Fenton honors Mental Health Awareness Month. Our mental health is just as important as our physical health, but it is frequently ignored. As a society, we do not often discuss mental health nor bring the issue to the forefront of our focus. Part of the problem is that public stigma and shame of mental illness are still prevalent.

Click above to view our open discussion with our panel of experienced healthcare professionals from May 11, 2022, as they discuss the following topics:

- How the pandemic has impacted our mental health
- How cultural differences, socio-economic status, and ethnicity affect the way we deal with mental health issues
- Legislation related to mental health care
- Tips on how to improve your inner wellness
- Resources that are available to meet your mental health needs

Our Panelists

Julie Wann is a member of Hoge Fenton's DEI Programming Subcommittee and will be moderating our discussion. She is an attorney who focuses on individual, partnership, and corporate taxation, and the formation of limited liability companies, partnerships, corporations, and nonprofits. Julie advises individuals in estate planning, wealth transfer, and tax planning, and entities in sales, purchases, and restructurings. She also structures real property transfers that preserve the real property tax basis.

Baotran Amanda Nguyen, AMFT & APCC is a Vietnamese-American mental health clinician with 5+ years of experience working with kids with Autism. She is currently employed at Hope Services (a non-profit organization) in Santa Clara County working with Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (ID/DD) and Neurotypical populations ranging from adolescents to the elderly. Baotran strives to provide tools and interventions to support clients' well-being and stabilize their home placement.
