Real Estate Claims and Disputes

How to Avoid a "Home Sale Gone Bad" and What Happens When a Dispute Arises

Good practices to avoid potential lawsuits, such as the "dos and don'ts" of preparing contract documents and corresponding with clients and others in the transaction.

Good practices for record keeping, documenting communications, disclosures, and presenting properties.

Real life examples and stories from complicated disputes that illustrate best and worst practices.

The typical legal and dispute resolution process in residential real estate transactions, and how things work at each stage.

Steven Kahn

Shareholder | HOGE • FENTON

Steven is a trial lawyer with Hoge Fenton and chair of the firm's real estate and land use practice group. He focuses on problem solving cases involving ownership, use, and control of real estate (land, leases, title, boundaries, easements). He typically advocates for his clients in litigation, but takes great pride in helping them avoid a dispute in the first place or reaching an efficient, fair resolution.
