PRACTICE OVERVIEW

Eugene (Geno) Ashley is a member of our Business Litigation, Real Estate and Construction groups. Geno has built his career counseling and advocating on behalf of his business clients in significant matters. A veteran trial lawyer, Geno's experience ranges from "bet the company" lawsuits with multi-million-dollar outcomes, to prosecuting and defending actions arising out of contracts and business torts, unfair business practices and trade secrets claims, and construction and real estate disputes.

Geno represents public and privately held corporations, businesses and individuals with intellectual property litigation and counseling, as well as general business and real estate litigation such as mechanic's liens. He has extensive experience in all facets of litigation, including trial. Geno has chaired numerous bench and jury trials, in addition to helping to guide clients through arbitration and settlements:

- In 2009, Geno tried a jury trial representing a plaintiff in a breach of contract lawsuit against the local division of a Chinese manufacturer of industrial materials. Geno's client was awarded everything they asked for by the jury, including a multi-million-dollar verdict.
- Geno helped win a multi-million-dollar bench trial verdict for a homeowner in San Francisco County.
- Geno won three trials representing a business owner going through a contentious divorce. The trials focused on control, operation, and management of the owner's businesses.
- Successfully arbitrated a million-dollar mechanic's lien and breach of contract action for a Bay Area client, large multi-unit residential development.
