PRACTICE OVERVIEW

Natasha Tran is member of the firm's Family Law Practice Group. She specializes in drafting Domestic Violence Restraining Orders and Request for Orders regarding child custody and visitation, support, and complex financial issues. Natasha represents clients in all stages of discovery while maintaining consistent communication with clients, opposing counsel, and experts. She effectively assists shareholders in preparation of and during trials, depositions, RFO hearings, and settlement conferences. She also has significant experience in preparing comprehensive marital settlement agreements, settlement proposals, and parenting plans to help families reach a mutual resolution.

BACKGROUND

Natasha began her family law career as a law clerk at a non-profit organization, Levitt & Quinn Family Law Center, Joy Stanley Law Corporation, and Rad Law Group. During law school she was a judicial extern for the Honorable Marc D. Gross at the Los Angeles Superior Court before he transitioned to civil and the honorable S. James Otero at the U.S. District Court, Central District of California. She was also the Chief Symposia Editor at Loyola of Los Angeles Law Review.
